

Valery Ndayishimiye

Description

Valery has four years of experience in the nonprofit sector, with outstanding skills in research, training, facilitation, and coaching. He previously worked with Give Directly Inc Rwanda and helped the organization set a better plan to serve vulnerable communities in Rwanda through conducting a community-based assessment of the direct-unconditional money transfer model. Valery worked with Digital Opportunity Trust, a youth-led movement of daring social innovators to empower young social innovators in Rwanda through facilitation, coaching, and advocacy. Before joining DOT, he worked with Outreach Development Solutions, a local consulting firm, first as an enumerator and then as a field supervisor. He has volunteered with various organizations such as Mozilla Foundation and Ashoka in projects ranging from digital literacy to social innovation. Valery has an interest in economic development and social entrepreneurship and has a strong passion for youth empowerment. He is currently working with CIDRA as a consultant on various projects regarding research and development.
